VERBAL DESCRIPTION:

This modeled censur fragment is composed of a fairly fine orange to tan clay with some inclusions. The fragment is the base of a sherd with an ear shape jutting out. The ear appears to be "stuck on," as the place of connection to the sherd is lumpy. The ear is 6.4 cm tall, 3.1 cm wide, and 1.1 cm thick. The top part of the ear has an ~~indent~~ indentation similar to a finger imprint. The bottom half of the <sup>ear</sup> sherd has a round scar, presumably from an ear flange. The rim of the ear is rounded. The bottom outside of the ear is extremely fire clouded. This is the only area on the sherd with evidence of fire clouding. The back of the sherd has brush strokes, making it appear fairly rough and somewhat crude (especially when one can see the chunky back of the ear).
